

A look inside at Uni SA Creative

The FSASA Board met with some current students for a closer look at them and their work on Thursday September 9, 2021

We were very privileged to have an opportunity to meet some of the Art students at Uni SA Creative and hear about their current work as they progress towards their final assessments and graduation show. It was wonderful to be able to talk to them individually about what they have been making and where their ideas have developed from.

Some of our student hosts with a sample of ceramic electives pieces

Ceramic Vase on display from a past student

Peter Fritton – third year student specializing in ceramics. This work was sensational – thanks for sharing Peter

Right - Painting Studio

Each painting student has their own small space where they can devise a working “studio” to allow them to set up materials and images. Each space was very unique and individual and it was great to see how creativity is ordered within the confines of the three walls.

At this stage of the year we are very much looking forward to an invitation from the student body to the Board of FSASA to attend their Graduate exhibition, which we have supported financially this year.

Hannah Coleman whose ceramic portraits are absolutely brilliant

Deborah Russell
Friends Board member

A selection of glass and ceramic pieces – but the banana was real!